A Saudi IT solutions company is launching a plan today to help organizations meet the increasing challenges of business globalization. XeCa, is a joint venture between Xenel Group and Computer Associates International, described as one of the world's largest IT computer software solutions companies. "XeCa brings leading technologies and proven methodologies to organizations across all sectors in the Kingdom," Ahmed Hisham Zainal, COO at XeCa said.

"XeCa builds expertise on the latest technology innovations and implements solutions that streamline information management for its customers." It claims to offer a full range of solutions to the region's major industries, from architecting enterprise applications to building voice over IP (VoIP) networks and consulting services.

Its services and solutions consist of Computer Associates products and services, E-business solutions, managed services such as IT and applications outsourcing, infrastructure solutions for networking and information security, and consulting services including IT health-check. "Through its joint venture partners, XeCa has acquired a rich pedigree of technology expertise, best practices and talent," he added.
